William Leahy, MD, practices neurology outside Washington, DC. He became involved with home health aide education both out of an interest in the care his patients received and to give direction and meaning to the lives of young people in his community. Royalties from his books fund a foundation for teaching high school students health care careers. Dr. Leahy speaks to groups about enriching our communities and volunteers his spare time to teach. He has been named a "2005 Hometown Hero" by Washington Magazine.

This book covers everything you'll need to know about providing home health aide. It is very detailed and thorough. The illustrations are very helpful in showing exactly how each process should be executed. Overall, I'm very pleased with this book and would recommend it to anyone who is interested in the HHA field.

I ordered this book Thursday n it was delivered as promised by Saturday bcuz I needed the book for class on Monday. I'm happy I got it on time! This is a good edition with details on everything u need to know within this profession.
