Painting Indiana II: The Changing Face Of Agriculture (Quarry Books)

Synopsis

Over the past hundred years, Indiana agriculture has evolved from family farming to a global industry using biotechnology and satellite positioning. This magnificent collection of more than 100 works of art by ten outstanding Indiana plein air painters tells the story of that transformation, the forces that brought it about, and the impact it has had on the people, the culture, and the economy of the state. These gifted artists, selected through a competition, painted subjects as diverse as livestock farms, lumber harvesting, meat packing, farmers' markets, and huge automated dairy operations. An introduction by Rachel Berenson Perry discusses the tradition of plein air painting in Indiana. Profiles of the artists and their work conclude this visually stunning book.

Very nice book, well prepared and a nice coffee table book to keep looking thru..

As a Hoosier and an artist living on the East Coast, I loved this book and the beautiful paintings from around Indiana. Sparked many happy memories of growing up a Hoosier.

Wonderful book for pictures and how farming is done for those few left on the farm and anyone interested in our country's history and progress. Book in excellent condition.

If you're from or live in Indiana and perhaps you also paint, then this book is very nice to have. The book itself is top quality with nice glossy thick pages. It's the best to display artwork.

This book shows various aspects of agriculture through wonderfully painted artwork. Range and variety of work shows depth. Great coffee table book, good gift for all Hoosiers and lovers of art.

This book is filled with beautiful artwork and excellent descriptions of the changes in agriculture here in Indiana. The paintings by Nancy Maxwell are particularly incredible.
