Shannon Watters is the creator of Lumberjanes, a comic book editor, founder of the BOOM! box imprint, and ã all around classy dame. Noelle Stevenson is the creator of the web comic Nimona. Stevenson started Nimona as a student at Maryland Institute College of Art. The comic was first published in June 2012 and doubled as Stevenson’s senior thesis.

Got this for my 12 year old daughter who loves the series. She mentioned the that the storyline in this particular book doesn't make sense and repeats. Sure enough, there is about 1/5 of the book missing: parts of parts of ch 17 and all of ch 18 are gone. Ch19 repeats twice. Of course she mentions this to me after the return window and we are stuck with a worthless book.

I love this series but this is one of the weaker ones. The storytelling and artwork wasn't as strong after the first chapter (the result of Noelle Stevenson's absence?), and I didn't care very much about what was going on when the merpeople. This series works best when the stories are centered on the core group of girls, their friendships, their conflicts. The first chapter of this volume was very cool, though, as it served as kind of an origin story. I hope Volume 6 gets back to what I love so much about this series, but I am worried quality will suffer as Noelle Stevenson becomes less involved.

My nine year old girl is obsessed with Lumberjanes. It's exciting and empowering a great graphic novel that's neither too sappy or too tough.

My granddaughter, who just turned eleven loves this series of books. It's comic books for girl's where they can be heroic and conquer the world.

Love this graphic novel series

A very great series that my daughter looks forward to with each book.

My daughter loves the books, can't put them down!

I purchased this book for my 9 year old granddaughter. She enjoyed it very much.
